A Little Romance that Reaches from New York to Georgia. FOND NORTHERN MAIDEN'S AFFECTIONS TRI-FLED WITH BY A RURAL "GRORGIA GENTLE-

Husband-hunting seems to have been the cause which recently led a robust and rather good-looking New York lady to leave her comfortable home in that city and come to the State of Georgia. Yesterday she returned home without a husband and in company with her mother and brother, who had accompanied her on a wild-goose chase in search of a man. A reporter of the Constitution saw the trio at the Union passenger depôt as they were awaiting the departure of a northern-bound train.

The countenance of the young female seemed to say that she was deeply disressed, probably occasioned by a feeling of severe disappointment, while her mother appeared to be taking things easily. Her brother was also troubled. He stated to a bystander that he was a fool for having come South with his mother and sister and spending nearly two bundred dollars in attempting to get a busband for his sister. This kind of conversation was not rejected but rather encouraged by those who stood near, and he gradually turned the whole story loose to his audience.

It seems that several months since his sister inserted the following notice in the New York Herald: "Wanted, a husband; would like to marry a tleman of comfortable circumstances residing in the South. S. E. R., Herald up-town office." Shortly after the appearance of this no-Herald, and desired to open up a correisement. The lady answered the letter im-

This letter she received with true delight, and in all probability kissed the signature of the missive a score of times. Delay was not to be thought of under any circumstances. She at once read to her mother and brother the letter that had made her feel so happy. A trip South was planned in a most hasty manner. The other two members of the family said that they would go with her and see the affair done up in the best of style. No new clothes were needed. All that had to be done was to bundle up such clothing as was now at band, and throw a few pairs of slippers into the trunks of those who were to constitute the party. Tickets were purchased without delay, and soon the trio were on their way to day, and has promised to take part in the Georgia as far as the Kennesaw route could discussion. It was with their visiting friends should direct the midnight when the party reached the house. After knocking on the door for some time, an old gray-headed man looked out and inquired "who was there?" The respone was "friends," and a moment after the situation was fully explained. The old man dressed himself and asked the party in. The surprise of the young lady when she saw that her lover was an old wreck of humanity rather than a young and handsome southerner can only be imagined. She turned away from him with a shudder and a feeling of great disappointment. The mother became wrathy, and the brother let fly a few not very complimentary remarks with reference to the old cuss," as he termed the farmer. An invitation to the party to remain until morning was indignantly refused, and the young lady, much depressed in spirits, accompanied by her wrathy and indignant mother and brother, entered the stage and were soon on their way to Hawkinsville.

Meeting an old negro upon their arrival there, they asked him how the man stood from a financial standpoint. The old negro looked up and remarked: "Why, missus, dat man hain't got a cent, and his farm is so po' dat a ground-mole would starve to def on it."

The first train that left Hawkinsville for Atlanta brought the disappointed trio away from the scene that had promised to be such a bright one to at least one member of the party, and ere now the would-be emigrants are on their return to New York city. The young lady should try it again. Probably she would have better luck. If at first you lowing cases: don't succeed, etc.-Atlanta (Ga.) Consti- Ruffin Hill (colored), an old offender,
